ON THE HORIZON

Lights at Night A night tour of one of Scotland's most famous modern ruins, St. Peter's Seminary, above, will open the country's first Festival of Architecture. For the ticketed event, called Hinterland, held March 18 to 27, audiences will walk through woodlands to explore the derelict buildings, backed by moving light installations and a specially commissioned recorded choral work performed by St. Salvator's Chapel Choir of the University of St. Andrews. Built 50 years ago, the structure was heralded as a modernist masterpiece of glass and concrete, but fell into disrepair after being deconsecrated in 1980. A planned restoration will transform it into an arts facility.

The architectural festival will also feature more than 400 events and exhibitions around the country. Flagship attractions include the Ideal Hut Show, a touring show from May to September featuring 20 model garden sheds customized by leading architects, designers and celebrities.

At Hotels, Fitness Programs for the New Year

Making a new year's resolution to get healthy is easy: Sticking to that goal as the months go by? Not so much. Next month, a number of hotels are trying to help keep their guests motivated by introducing long-term fitness initiatives and packages.

Meadowood Napa Valley in California, for example, is introducing the Healthiest Year Yet package, including overnight accommodations; a 90-minute outdoor fitness class; a personal-training session; unlimited fitness classes like Zumba; and unlimited sports like tennis and golf. Prices from $1,800 for two for two nights.

The package was created specifically to keep guests excited about their goals to exercise more, said Kerry Brackett, the Meadowood health and fitness manager. "New Year's resolutions help set the tone for your year," she said, "but follow-through is often difficult, and we wanted to find a way to keep the momentum going."

Also next month, Hotel Domestique, a 13-room boutique property in the Blue Ridge Mountains in South Carolina, is introducing its three-night Mountain Biking Adventure package. Guests receive mountain bike rentals, two days of guided riding in the Pisgah or Dupont forests, lunch daily and $100 to spend on dinner at its restaurant. Prices from $2,000 for three nights for two people.

Esperanza, an Auberge Resort in Los Cabos, Mexico, is introducing a wellness concierge, Barbie Alvarez, who works with guests to create a personalized fitness program. A 60-minute session is $75; nightly room rates from $590.

The Mulia Bali in Indonesia is restarting its wellness program with fitness classes such as combat martial arts, and menus with dishes 300 calories or less. It is open to both guests and nonguests; prices from $465 for a half-day.

And in New York City, the Refinery Hotel is starting a series of monthly fitness classes next month; they will be held on the rooftop and are available to guests and nonguests. On Feb. 13, teachers from the yoga center Y7 Studio will offer a cardio-based vinyasa class set to hip-hop music ($35 a person).
